

Home Office Information

Coping With Grief

This downloadable leaflet is aimed at those who are experiencing bereavement through murder or manslaughter. A lot of the information applies to anyone who has lost someone close. But we have highlighted the areas where problems may be worse because of how the death happened. This leaflet does not replace any counselling or other help you may need. A list of organisations that can offer support can be found at the end of the main part of the pack.

Information For The Bereaved

This downloadable leaflet contains information about decisions and arrangements you may need to make, like deciding whether you would like to view the deceased person or how to arrange a funeral.
It also explains how the criminal justice system works and what the police, the coroner and the courts will do now.